Dolsotbap (Hot Pot Rice)

It is popular particularly among the older generation because it tastes just like rice cooked in an old-fashioned iron pot. The restaurant serves side dishes made with fresh vegetables that are grown in farms in the vicinity of Daejeon. Side dishes prepared with wild greens freshly picked on nearby mountains are full of natural flavors and taste delicious.

Seolleongtang (Ox Bone Soup)

This ox bone soup has become Daejeon's popular local food since a restaurant near Daejeon Station, which specialized in this soup, became very famous 40 years ago. The soup base is obtained after boiling beef bones over the course of several hours. Radish Kimchi and cabbage Kimchi are served as sidedishes.

Daechongho Maeuntang (Spicy Freshwater Fish Stew)

Mandarin fishes caught in the Geumgang River used to be a regional specialty and were presented as such to the kings of the Joseon Dynasty. Sintangin has long been known for dishes prepared with freshwater fish as their main ingredient. After the dam was built in 1981, spicy fish stew restaurants began to be open and now the area is reputed to serve the best spicy fish stews made with freshwater fish caught in the pristine, pollution-free water of the Geumgang River.
